"Courthouse Finds," will be the topic of a presentation by genealogist Tina Beaird. Courthouses are great resources for personal family history. Probate files, chancery cases, land sales and lawsuits are just a few of the types of records one can find in local courthouse files. Tina will share tips and tricks for family researchers to identify and secure these records.

A Call for Articles — JGSI has its tagline "Members Helping Members since 1981." Help is offered in many ways – some are: the help desk, the phone line, the members forum on the website, the library, articles and production volunteers for Morasha, friends helping friends, volunteers helping to populate the JGSI Jewish Chicago database, and networking at meetings.

In the next issue of Morasha, not only can you publicly say thanks, but others can learn from how you were helped and what you learned. Articles may be about 150 words or use up to 1,500 words to tell us the larger story where a member's help is just one aspect of your discovery journey. Photos or exhibits in jpeg format a plus. Submissions are due February 1st but an earlier note to let me know you're planning a longer article is appreciated. Shorter articles are welcome too!
